"Go and see Frank Cook; he knows". Frank Cook is the name by which Lord is known in Newark. Lord also says that Fritz is probably known to William Hall, who does business in an old horse barn, sells pigs, hires horses, in the thirty seven hundred block of Old York Road, Philadelphia. His idea is that either of these persons will need to be approached very delicately, as otherwise they would not give the information and would probably send word to Fritz, though Fritz is a truthful person and, if assured he would not get into trouble by telling the story, thinks he would say exactly what took place.

Whether there is anything in the above I do not know; Lord was a bit obscure as to the arrangements at the Phillips Farm and so on; yet he made no demands or requests upon me. My thought is that perhaps someone in the butcher business or horse business in Newark might make an inquiry of Finkel, indicating that he wanted to use Fritz in his business.

Very truly yours,
